No greater misconception of any public institution prevails to-day than the general idea of the leper settle ment on the island of Molokai, R. B. Kidd says in Harper's Weekly. Instead of the entire island being used for such purpose, the settlement comprises only eight square miles of a total area of 261 square miles. It oc cupies a tongue of land on the northern side of Molokal. The north, east and, west shores of this tiny spot are washed by the Pacific, while on the south side rise precipitous cliffs of from 1,800 to 4,000 feet, which make the isolation seem even more honeless. than the beautiful deep-blue waters of manned by government guards, foils were ever contemplated by the land side. Naturally the fear of being isolated at the settlement caused, the natives to thwart segregation. Generally it was done by secreting their afflicted. yet there are instances of lepers using violence to resist arrest. The nesity of severing ties of the strongest affection involved grief of the deepest description, and many are the cases of abnegation where the clean have accompanied the afflicted to the settlement to die there with them. Then, too, by degrees there grew, up the belief among the natives that terrible mistakes of diagnosis by the physicians were consigning innocent and helpless people to the living sepulcher. And as each year failed to eradicate the disease as had been represent ed, but still claimed its toll, the belief became almost universal that a larger proportion of those committed were sacrifices to the despotism and norance of the white man's medical science that boasted but could not

By degrees, as the governmentare ized the inability of the afflicted to care for themselves, conditions we improved, until finally the authorities took entire charge of the lepers, and to day the appropriations for the maintenance and care of these wards are most generous and exceed $125,000 an-

To select a spiritual dwelling selves in the adjustment of our social conditions we shall have a Christian experience because we are meeting the demands of the promise: "If ye Jo the will of my Father ye shall know of the doctrine." The Christian life is a busy life in faith and good works. We believe the promise; we put our faith into practice and there comes conscious blessing.

Personal faith in Jesus as a divine build one's house in a stagnant marsh or to live in a dark, unventilated cellar.

Notice that Paul writes as if men

Saviour never fails of spiritual results. It dispels doubt and opens the door of spiritual joys that are bright and restful in the hopes of immortal life. It is man's inheritance and all should possess it. It is a fearful mistake to lose it. Conviction for sin is the sinner's experience; forgiveness for sin is the Christian's experience. latter state of life is just as manifest as the former. Sin brings sorrow. Forgiveness brings joy and gladness.

Prayer is a personal matter and it never fails in good results to the one who prays. We may not get what we It might not be best that we should. But the loving spirit in which we pray will be of great spiritual value to us because of the feeling we have that God is pleased with what have done. Our field of religious work may not be in behalf of institutional charities. There are spiritual needs as well as temporal needs. The evi dence of answers to our prayers may be within our hearts and the world may see in us the the results of pray er as manifestly as in any institution whose support may come in answer to stitution through which God reaches the irreligious world. Christian experience is the strongest argument we can make to win the ble circumstances. The difference is entirely mental. One man is miseraworld to Christ. HYMNS AND THEIR AUTHORS THE SOUL'S WARFARE.

Insect Catcher.

In this country all sorts of homely devices are used to catch the bugs and kill them, and an Oregon man, who probably had his apple orchard overrun by some destructive species patented a tray for the pests. A barrel has pieces cut out of the upper porton and it half filled with rotten or bruised apples or some other odoriferous fruit. On top of the barrel is placed a pan partially filled with water, oil or some poisonous liquid. From the apex of a tripod that keeps the basin from falling off the barrel hangs a lantern. In the daytime the insects will be attracted by the odor of the fruit, and in flying up to feast many of them are likely to fly into the water. At night the lantern is lighted and bugs will come from afar to flutter against/it and meet their death in the liquid below.

In the Senate Tuesday the traffic agreement provision and section 12. dealing with the combination of railroads, were stricken from the railroad bill. The Senate also passed a House bill creating an art commission for Washington. The House also removed from the traffic greement pro-vision from the rail bill. The House agreed to the long-and-short-haul clause of the House bill in the form that it came from the committee except that it provided for an investigamission of data relating to that class of rates.

As no one cared to discuss the railroad measure the Senate Wednesday took up bills on the calendar. Mr. Si-mons delivered a speech condemning he method of the Department of his tice in its prosecutions of the cotton pools. The Senate passed the pension appropriation bill, carrying $155,000, 000. Bribery Probe in Illinois. Indictments against three members of the Illinois General Assembly-one harging bribery and two charging perjury—were voted the other day, by the special grand jury, in Chicago, which has been delving into the legislative bribery scandal.

The three true bills, which cover both phases of the confessions of Representative Charles A. White of O'Falion, and H. J. C. Beckemeyer of Car lyle, that they received $1,000 each for voting for William Lorimer for United States Senator and that later they shared in a legislative "jack-pot" that was split up in St. Louis, were returned against the following:

Representative Lee O'Neil Browne of Ottawa, minority leader of the House, indicted for bribery on fifteen counts setting up that he paid to Rep-resentative Charles A. White $850 in Chicago as part of a $1,000 bribe for voting for Senator Lorimer. Bond fixed at $15,000.

Representative Robert E. Wilson of Chicago, indicted for willful and corrupt perjury for swearing before the grand jury that he did not hand any money ito anybody in St. Louis July 15, 1909, the day it is alleged the "jack pot" was divided. Bail fixed at $15,-

Mitchell, indicted for perjury for swearing before the grand jury that he was not in St. Louis July 15, 1909, and did not meet Robert E. Wilson in that city on that day. Bail fixed at $5,000. The true bills were returned to Judge Kersten by the grand jurors and caplases were at once issued for the three legislators. A fourth indictment, having no connection with the charges concerning Senator Lorimer's election and the "jackpot" distribution, was returned against William J. Henley, former president, and at one time vice presi dent and general manager of the Chicago and Western Indiana Railroad. charging him with embezzling and converting to his own use $28,000 of the road's money.

TOWN HAS DISAPPEARED.

Once Thriving Village Has Vanished

Within Three Decades.

Perhaps the only instance in Michigan where a good sized town has been completely wiped off the map within three decades is furnished by Huron County. Thirty years ago Port Crescent, at the entrance of Saginaw bay was a thriving village of 1,100 populaayed by a confederate before he got tion and the second largest town in chance to execute any of them. the county. To-day there is not a show where the prosperous little city stood. It formerly had sawmills, a salt block, two good hotels, a steam boat connection with Detroit, several large stores and many comfortable residences. The salt supply gave out, the timber and lumber became exhausted, capitalists went elsewhere, labor followed, and within a few years. Port Crescent vanished. There was little good farming land in the immediate vicinity, and nothing left to support business enterprises. The buildings were torn down and moved away, many of the better ones form-Kinde, fifteen miles away.

STRAWBERRY CROP NOT HURT.

Raising strawberries in upper Mich igan has become an horticultural industry of no small-importance. The soil is particularly suited to the growth of the fruit and the berries are large and luscious and are in ager demand both in the home and outside markets. The fruit does not ripen until the crops to the South have been harvested and sold and quality of the berries the upper pen-insula product commands the highest prices. Many thousands, of cases were narketed last season, and this year the harvest will be even larger. There are few farmers who do not devote e area of land to the cultivation of the fruit, the ground set apart for the purpose ranging all the way from a small patch to fields acres in extent, and each year sees the acreage inand profitable in upper Michigan, and probably more so than any other.

Edward VII. of England was a soy eign much of whose succes as a ruler was based on his attributes as a man He labored hard and was scrupulous in fulfilling the huge multiplicity o duties which were his, and he aug mented as sovereign the tremendou personal popularity he had won as Prince of Wales. Above all things it was his personal qualities which made him live as he did in the hearts of his people, and he was unquestionably one of the most popular holders of the kingly title in the history of Enjust as fond of him as those who lived of Wales which gave to Edward much training in kingeraft which he displayed so well when he received the crown at the age of 60.

His love for peace was strikingly shown during the latter part of the Boer war, which was not yet settled when he came to the throne. He in sisted that the struggle must be ended the instant that it was possible to do so with credit to the British arms. and to Edward the chroniclers of the day gave much of the credit when peace was finally restored for the bringing to an end of hostlitles in a was after the declaration of peace that England came to a full realization that turf. tended to exercise in the empire's afnence on the side of the broadest wisdom.

Becomes King and Emperor It was Jan. 22, 1901, that Albert Ed-yard, Prince of Wales, became King of England and Emperor of India the oment that Queen Victoria died. The following day he took the oath in his dual capacity as king and emperor: The ceremony took place at St. James Palace at 9 o'clock in the morning. The formal proclamation of the king took place on Jan. 24, and was a plo turesque spectacle. The college of or Heralds' college, which enacted the ceremony, was almost unknown to the general public. The participants in the ceremony seemed like

Edward's coronation took place Aug. 9, 1902, having been postponed from the latter part of June of the same June, Edward was seized with severe intestinal trouble, and an operation ame necessary on June 24 for per ityphilis. For several days his life was despaired of, and the whole British Empire hung in suspense upon the markable fashion. The Prince who made so capable a King was born on Nov. 9, 1841, at Buckingham Palace, and at the news and of the empire went wild with joy. An heir to the crown had been given to Britons, and Britain celebrated that eyent ecstatically. The youth and early supposed of the Prince was not ver different from that of any other boy born to good fortune, except that the slightest incident in relation to him was followed with the keennest eager ness by the nation which had jubilated over his birth.

He studied at Edinburgh and then entered Christ Church, Oxford. Dur ing these years he made his first trip on the continent of Europe, visiting Paris with his parents and sister. That visit was historic, Queen Victoria being the first English sovereign to enter STRANGE LIFE OF GEORGE V. England's New King Was Not - Reared-to-the-Throne.

George V. brings to the throne of England a considerable experience of his own in the routine demands of public service made upon him as Prince of Wales, and he comes to the task of governing with ability, good personal character and a serious sense of his own responsibilities.

The new King is less democration than was his father and does not have such an ardent love for sports. It has been predicted, therefore, that after his accession to the throne the court gayety? which was always a feature during Edward's reign, will be less marked

It should not be forgotten, in consider ering the attributes of the new King, that he was not brought up as the heir to the crown. Chroniclers who were in a position to know state that he came to the honors and duties of heir ship with no desire and with real regret. He was 27 years old before h became heir to the crown through the death of his elder brother, Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence and Av ondale.

Prior to that time he had been at lib erty, as a mere second son of the ther low in large degree his own inclina-tions. Those inclinations were for a quiet life, with little of pomp and pubwhich he had actively followed since he was 12 years old, when he entered the pavy. As the "sailor prince" he was popular with Englishmen.

He wanted to live unostentatiously and to pursue his career in his own way. He had married, morganatically, a woman whom he loved and who loved him—a niece of Vice Admiral Tryon of the British navy, who lost his life in the Victoria-Camperdown collision in the Mediterranean in 1893 The wedding took place in the English Church at Malta, and two children were porn to the couple.

Such was the situation of George's life in January, 1892, when the Duke of Clarence died. George found him self heir to the throne, with vast du-ties awalting him. Immediately his entire life was changed. He had to give up-the sea, he had to abandon his retired life, he had to part from his-morganatic wife. The heir to the throne of the British Empire faced duties inconsistent with the life pos sible to a prince not in the direct line of succession.

Men who were in a position to know declare that George renounced his quiet-life as the "sailor prince" with a regret so deep that it changed his whole outlook on the world. It is cor tain that after he became helr to the throne he exhibited a coldness, a lack of whole-hearted interest, a species of bored tolerance of life which had not marked him before.

Not only was George, when he became heir, forced to take up the publie duties of the Duke of Clarence, but he was also obliged to marry his broth-Teck, or "Princess May," as she was ing. popularly known, had been chosen as he future Queen of England, and he marriage to the Duke of Clarence was to have occurred in 1892 After the Duke's death Queen Victoria ordered George to marry the present queen. In 1893-George did-so, when the pe-riod of mourning for the Duke of Clarence was ended. The metamorphosis in the present king's life wa

ALEXANDRA DOWAGER QUEEN.

Although a Dane by Birth, She Has Always Enjoyed Popularity. Dowager Queen Alexandra, as she now becomes, although a Dane by birth, has always been popular in the extreme both in England and the colnies. Gracious, kind-hearted, clever, handsome and lovable, Queen Alexandra has appealed strongly to the affections of the British and has for years established as only second in popularity of the members of the royal family to the late king himself. Alexandra's physical attributes have undoubtedly aided her much in obtaining popularity, for her perfection of face and figure were such as to win cold cents an hour and are asking for later years the queen has contrived to maintain much of her personal grace, and at Edward VII,'s coronation in 1902 it was declared by many esses present in Westminster Abbey that the queen did not look a day over 35, although she was then 58. Alexan-dra has a particularly fine talent in the art of dressing well, and sets herself off by peculiarly becoming attired Every detail of her costumes seems to have been made for her, and her alone. and she is invariably gowned in what appears just the right thing for the casion, devoid of exaggerations of style.
